Not illustrated. 1894 Excerpt: . . . should be willing to pay something for the protection of the health of their families, if they are rightly taxed for their security and education. While laws of taxation may be unjust in detail, so long as the people recognize as correct the general principle of equity that underlies them, they should not attempt to evade the burden thereby imposed. There are 11, 866 persons paying a tax in this city; of this number 5461 pay a property tax, four-fifths of which pay a tax on real estate. If the cost of sewerage is to be paid by this class, an expense of over 1, 000, 000 will have to be met by about onesixth of the entire population of the city; and if it is the health of this population, or 30, 000 people, which has demanded the introduction of this improvement, then all those...
