Attraction and Repulsion

By Robert Scott Leyse

ShatterColors Press. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 356 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 1.0in. A Parisian fight-for-love story. Having just arrived in Paris, New Yorkers William, Christina, and Pascale are looking forward to six weeks of uninhibited fun with their French friends, a group of students and aspiring actors--everyone is in their early twenties, neither settled into careers nor domestic life. Adventures are soon had in Pre Lachaise cemetery, at a raucous Montparnasse loft party, and under the stars in Montsouris Park. Matters become unexpectedly serious when William meets Genevieve, a native Parisian, and they fall deeply in love--a first time experience for both. As William and Genevieve begin to get to know one another an obstacle presents itself in the person of Baptiste, a childhood friend of Genevieves who delusionally believes himself entitled to her affection and begins a campaign of interference and intimidation. So insufferable does Baptiste become that Genevieve and the group as a whole sever all ties with him; enraged at being denied direct access to Genevieve, he begins stalking her and assaults William in the street. In response, a humiliating prank is played on Baptiste in an effort to frighten him off. Instead of having...
