LAWRENCE A lecture delivered in New York, under the auspices of the Department of Education of the City of New York, in 1906. There is much diversity of opinion concerning the degree of greatness belonging to Longfellow as a poet, but all agree as to the beauty, purity, and sweetness of his songs. If his flights are not of the soaring kind that pierce the clouds, they never descend to the depths of darkness. He wrote nothing that could by any possible means injure his fellowman, but, on the contrary, imbued his words with the spirit that cheers, strengthens, and uplifts. We can go to him as to a friend with whom it is a delight to commune, and we will leave him feeling refreshed, encouraged, and improved. As a man, he was the personification of nobility;...
