And, as deeply, lowly waiting For the stillness that I love, Feel I not its soft descendings On a mission from above? Feel I not a secret guiding, --Felt and owned, though erst unseen, --Sometimes teaching, often chiding, Always pointing where to lean? Oh, how vain were every blessing Human spirits can possess, Were this secret gift withholden? Or its power to soothe and bless? Heavenly quiet? bless my journey Through the remnant of my days; Speech is silvern, silence golden, --Silence, then, shall utter praise. Come, my spirit, to His presence, --Giver, Leader, Father, Lord!--Words, alone, are nought before Thee! Thou, alone, may speak the Word! Let me worship and adore Thee, With a broken, contrite sigh; Wrapping all my mantle o'er me, While Thy presence passeth by. The writer frequently visited a young woman (a Methodist) who had long been disabled by scrofula. In one of those visits she said, I find I can pray without kneeling. I CANNOT kneel; and once I vainly thought That all my prayers were fruitless offerings here; That form, and voice, and words must all be brought, To bear my longings to my Saviour's ear. I cannot kneel; but I have learned and known That prayer is prayer, without the bended knee; That it will upward rise, and reach His throne Whom my pent spirit languisheth to see. And once I murmured at my sorrowing lot, --That...
