If this in me shall pass, so too Shall all in that to my solidity, So solid-seeming now. Therefore, I m forced To name the. voip the passing, and its source The grand eternal, the only permanent! Oh! hence, along those rugged ledges, where Thy young thoughts stalk, thy fears, were I, as erst, To venture much, were not, I grant thee now Without a footing! Yes, it easier is To wander from yon moon, however faint Her guiding light--which still is light from heaven--Than to return and gaze upon her face, With that wild depth of love you speak of, when We ve drowned her rays with other light--which light, Howe er so broad, may still be earth s! This gem Of mine may have its spots unpolished here And there--its...
